

As a Financial Coach Client, you are asked to commit to the following:

- A significant effort to develop better financial habits.
- Regular prayer for learning and adopting new financial practices.
- Honest and openness regarding your current financial situation.
- A consistent commitment of time, more at first but then tapering off gradually.
- A willingness on your part to be accountable to the budget you and your counselor design.

As a counselor, I commit to you:

- Encouragement
- Regular thoughts and prayers for you and your situation.
- Respect for your privacy. All information you convey to me is kept confidential.
- Time to meet with you.
- Training seminars to sharpen my skills and knowledge.
- My skills and expertise in budget coaching and the application of the Biblical Financial Principles to my own life.
- Ideas to challenge you in your spiritual growth in the financial area of your life.

We both understand the following regarding this financial coaching support:

- This support is being offered without charge or obligation.
- Though results are not guaranteed, the goal is to assist in developing a plan.
- All parties involved agree to hold harmless each other and the sponsoring church from any claim, suit, action, demand or liability of any kind arising from participation in this coaching support.
